Top stories:

Adjunct Law Professor Jay Wolfson was quoted in the Oct. 1 Florida Independent regarding the constitutionality of a new Florida law regulating prescription pills at pain clinics.

Law Professor Darryl Wilson was quoted in the Sept. 29 Channel 10 News for his insight on the Hard Rock Café International intellectual property lawsuit over the TV show Rehab.

Student Amanda Mazzie has raised funds to donate more than 750 weather radios to needy families through her Champs Help Association Inc., a registered nonprofit that provides weather-alert radios to those who cannot afford them, the Daytona Beach News-Journal reported Sept. 27.

The Sept. 28 Tampa Tribune quoted Law Professor Michael Allen in an article about a federal judge ordering a state judge not to interfere with a lawyer's actions in a Scientology case. This article was also published in The Suncoast News.

Other stories this week:

Stetson's Teacher Ed program was mentioned in a story about Daytona State College's first graduating class of teachers in the Sept. 29 Daytona Beach News-Journal.

Adjunct Law Professor Thomas Ramsberger was quoted in an article appearing in the Sept. 28 Tampa Tribune on the illegality of recording NFL Bucs games and posting them online for others to watch. Additionally, Ramsberger was quoted in an article appearing Sept. 27 on Suite101.com, The Tampa Tribune, and Info Tech News for his insight as to whether bar owners could show the illegal game posted on the Internet.

Alumna and staff member Savannah-Jane Atkins received Florida Campus Compact's Community Engagement Educator Award for 2010, the DeLand-Deltona Beacon reported Sept. 28.

Political Science Professor T. Wayne Bailey discussed the effect of “negative coattails” (from the unpopularity of President Barack Obama) on the Scott-Sink gubernatorial campaign in the Sept. 27 issue of the DeLand-Deltona Beacon.

Opera Theatre’s Opera Gala, to be held Oct. 8 at the Athens Theatre, was announced Oct. 1 by the Southwest Volusia website.

Sister Jamie Phelps’ lecture “Katrina – Five Years Later,” part of the Black Catholic Theological Symposium to be held at Stetson Oct. 7-10, was featured on the Southwest Volusia website. The Jewish Student Organization’s observance of Sukkot, the Symphony Orchestra’s “Meet the Muse, Meet the Music” concert, the lecture by UK record promoter Tony Michaelidis, and Johnny Cupcakes’ visit to Stetson were highlighted in the Sept. 27 Higher Education column in the Daytona Beach News-Journal.
The Jazz Ensemble’s Oct. 6 concert was announced on the Targeted News Service website Oct. 1.

The start of ticket sales for the Christmas Candlelight Concerts was announced by the Targeted News Service on Oct. 1.

An upcoming lecture on illegal immigration, the start of ticket sales for the Christmas Candlelight Concerts and a political rally were announced Oct. 1 by the DeLand-Deltona Beacon.

In the blogosphere:

On Sept. 27, senior William Blazejeski contributed a new post to the Wall Street Journal’s Hire Education blog, a project for which he and a handful of other select college seniors are chronicling their job-search experience.

The Orlando Sentinel’s “Postcards From Florida” blog on Sept. 30 announced that Art History Professor Roberta Favis will present a “Women and Art” lectures series at the Florida Museum for Women Artists in October and November.

According to the Sept. 27 Commercial Law Blog, the Annual Spring Conference on Contract Law will be held at Stetson University College of Law on Feb. 18-19.

Three photographs and coverage of the Johnny Cupcakes lecture at Stetson University were featured on the music-fashion-literature blog Repidemik on Sept. 30.

Visiting Assistant Professor of Journalism Andy Dehnart, a reality TV expert, featured coverage from an on-campus debate on pornography in his Reality Blurred blog Sept. 25. No link available.

Law Professor Catherine J. Cameron will be one of the panelists for the “Exercising Your Right to Know: Getting Access to Government Information” panel at the Media Law in Digital Age Workshop, according to the Sept. 25 Public Journalism Network.

Law Professor Charles H. Rose III was mentioned in post on LawSitesBlog.com because of his involvement with teaching courses on a new website, Beyond the Bar, which trains new associates in “business skills, legal skills and client relations.”

According to Sept. 30 Legal Writing Prof Blog, the Tampa campus of Stetson University College of Law will host a Legal Writing Clinic one-day workshop on Dec. 3.

The Stetson University Bookstore was mentioned in the Books by Experts blog Sept. 30 as one of several bookstores in six states partnering with Eco-Libris in a sustainable reading initiative.

Alumni in the News:

Law alumna Heidi Davis was appointed to be the next circuit judge by Governor Charlie Crist, according to Sept. 27 Ocala.com, Hernando Today, and CapitalSoup.com. According to the Sept. 28 Bay News 9, alumnus James Grant is the Republican candidate running for State House District 47.