published in the Catholic Law Review. He has been invited by the Colorado Journal of International Environmental Law and Policy to serve as a commentator on biodiversity and wetland issues. Dean Gardner was re-elected vice chair of the U.S. National Ramsar Committee, which promotes the goals of the Convention on Wetlands, and continues to serve as a vice chair of the ABA’s Wetlands and Water Quality Committee.

Richard B. Graves III
Instructor of Legal Research and Writing

Professor Graves presented his paper, “Recognition Reconsidered: Foreign Intellectual Property Judgments and the Public Policy Exception,” at the annual meeting of the Southeastern Association of Law Schools in July. The paper was one of only four selected for presentation. In September, he presented “Reasoning Route-Arounds: Shortcuts for Use with Hard-to-Reach Students” at the Southeastern Regional Research and Writing Conference. Professor Graves also has been selected as a Master of the Judge John Scheb Inn in Sarasota.

Bruce R. Jacob
Dean Emeritus and Professor of Law

Since March, Dean Jacob has been the featured speaker at events in Tampa, Orlando and Miami regarding the 40th anniversary of Gideon v. Wainwright, in which Dean Jacob represented the State of Florida.

Julian R. Kossow
Visiting Associate Professor of Law

Professor Kossow taught in Stetson’s summer abroad program in Tallinn, Estonia. His topic was a comparative analysis of the ways in which various European countries have attempted to compensate their citizens for property expropriated by the Nazis or the Soviets.

Thomas C. Marks Jr.
Professor of Law

Professor Marks’ article, “Federalism and the Florida Constitution: The Self-Inflicted Wounds of Throwed Away Independence From the Control of the U.S. Supreme Court,” has been published by the Albany Law Review. An article titled “Now You See It, Now You Don’t: Privacy and Search and Seizure in the Florida Constitution” has been accepted for publication in Albany Law Review for 2004. An article titled “Adhere Resolutely to a Mistake: The Florida Taxpayer Standing Cases” has been accepted for publication by the Stetson Law Review. In November 2002, the Tallahassee Democrat published an opinion piece by Professor Marks about the proposed constitutional amendments on the ballot.

Professor Marks has accepted an invitation from the Albany Law Review to be a member of the Professional Board of Editors for its annual State Constitutional Commentary Issue. Professor Marks has been asked to co-chair the Christian education “cluster” and to serve on the Church Council of Pasadena Community Church.

Lizabeth A. Moody
Dean Emeritus and Distinguished University Professor

Dean Moody began her term as the first female chair of the ABA Senior Lawyers Section at the ABA Annual Meeting in San Francisco this August.

Rebecca C. Morgan
Boston Asset Management Faculty Chair and Director, Center for Excellence in Elder Law

Professor Morgan has given elder law presentations to numerous audiences, including the Elder Law Section of The Florida Bar and the National Academy of Elder Law Attorneys. In June, Professor Morgan was awarded the Faculty Professionalism award for 2003 by the Florida Supreme Court Committee on Professionalism. Professor Morgan is currently working on a new book, Understanding Elder Law.

Carolyn J. Nygren
Visiting Assistant Professor of Law

Professor Nygren hosted an LSAC academic support conference at Stetson in June. She will be a presenter in the Academic Support Section program at the AALS annual meeting in January.

Marleen A. O’Connor
Professor of Law

Professor O’Connor’s most recent article, “American Corporate Governance and Resilient Families,” will be published in Volume 77 of the Southern California Law Review. She was also a speaker at the Midwest Political Science Association in Chicago in April on Corporate Responsibility for Work/Family Programs.

Ann M. Piccard
Instructor of Legal Research and Writing

Professor Piccard co-authored an article on the jurisdiction of Florida’s District Courts of Appeal, which will be published in the Fall 2003 issue of the Stetson Law Review.

Theresa J. Pulley Radwan
Assistant Professor of Law

Hon. John Scheb
Distinguished Professorial Lecturer

Wm. Reece Smith Jr.
Distinguished Professorial Lecturer

Bay Area Legal Services presented Professor Smith with the Spirit of Philanthropy Award, and the University of Tampa Center for Ethics honored him with the 2003 Tampa Bay Ethics Award. Professor Smith celebrated 50 years with his law firm, Carlton Fields, where he is Chair Emeritus and Of Counsel.

Professor Adams authors book on law school success

Stetson Law Professor Kristen David Adams has authored the definitive work on succeeding in law school — The Practice of Law School: Getting In and Making the Most of Your Legal Education.

“I wrote this book to inspire people to be excited about law school,” said Professor Adams. “My goal is to help families understand law school and what it means to be a lawyer.”

Professor Adams co-authored the book with long-time friend and former colleague Christen Civiletto Carey. “Christen and I wrote this book to help new and aspiring law students succeed at every stage of their law school experience,” Adams said. “The book is intended to encourage students to personalize their experience with fulfilling activities such as law review, student bar association, trial teams or other student organizations.”

After reading the book, Nancy Rapoport, dean of University of Houston Law Center wrote, “The Practice of Law School is the only book I’ve seen that shows potential law students both the forest and the trees.”

Dean David E. Shipley, University of Georgia School of Law wrote, “My daughter will be 11 this fall, and I am recommending that she read The Practice of Law School. I probably should make it required reading for all first-year students.”

The Practice of Law School was published by ALM Publishing, a division of American Lawyer Media. It is available at www.lawcatalog.com and at the Stetson University College of Law bookstore.

Dean Emeritus chairs ABA Senior Lawyers Division

Dean Emeritus and Distinguished University Professor Lizabeth A. Moody began her one-year term as chair of the ABA Senior Lawyers Division at the American Bar Association’s annual meeting, held in San Francisco in August. She also serves on the council of the ABA Section of Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar.

Dean Moody is the first woman to chair the 9,000-member division, which is open to attorneys with at least 25 years of experience or at least age 55. The membership includes many active judges, past ABA officers and other high-profile lawyers.

Under Moody’s direction, the Senior Lawyers Division has added an e-mail newsletter to its membership communications. During her term, she also wants to expand the division’s other services and activities, including continuing legal education programs. The first such CLE program, “Alzheimers and the Law,” was recently presented in Ohio and co-sponsored by the Cleveland Bar Association.

Dean Moody first joined the College of Law as vice president and dean in 1994 and returned to the classroom in 1999. Under her leadership, Stetson earned its first Number One ranking in trial advocacy by U.S. News & World Report, built the Law Library and Legal Information Center, and established the LL.M. program in International Law and Business and the summer program in Tallinn, Estonia.
Stetson welcomes new law faculty

Paul J. Boudreaux joins Stetson as an assistant professor, teaching property and administrative law courses. Professor Boudreaux has served as a visiting faculty member at the University of Richmond School of Law and at Tulane University School of Law. He holds a B.A. and a J.D. from the University of Virginia, where he was Executive Editor of the Virginia Law Review. He holds an LL.M. from Georgetown University, where he received the Chetwood Award for highest LL.M. academic achievement. After law school, he clerked for U.S. District Court Judge George Revercomb and worked as a trial attorney for the U.S. Department of Justice for more than 10 years.

Bruce Carolan serves as a visiting professor of law teaching international law. Professor Carolan heads the Law Department of the Dublin Institute of Technology in Ireland. He earned an LL.M. in European Community Law from the National University of Ireland and a J.D. from the University of Miami Law School. He has taught in U.S. summer programs in Switzerland, Belgium, Brazil and Ireland. He also taught at the University of Florida’s Warrington College of Business.

Nicholas B. Cox serves as the Elder Consumer Protection Fellow. In this role, he supervises Stetson’s new Elder Consumer Protection Program and teaches advocacy and consumer protection courses. Most recently, Professor Cox worked in the Florida Attorney General’s Office as the Bureau Chief of the Economic Crimes Litigation Unit. He earned his B.A. from University of South Florida and his J.D. from Washburn University School of Law.

Clark W. Furlow is a visiting assistant professor of law, teaching in the areas of agency and corporations. An experienced corporate lawyer, he was a partner with Smith Katzenstein & Furlow in Delaware, where he litigated stockholder actions, usually in the context of a merger or acquisition. He earned a B.A. degree from Boston University and his J.D. from Emory University School of Law, where he served on the Emory Law Review.

Carol Henderson serves as a visiting professor of law and Director of the National Clearinghouse for Science, Technology and the Law. In addition to directing the clearinghouse, Professor Henderson supervises student research projects and teaches scientific evidence. She is a tenured professor of law at Nova Southeastern University’s Shepard Broad Law Center, where she has taught since 1986. Professor Henderson is a recognized authority in scientific evidence, criminal law and ethics. She has presented more than 100 lectures and has written three books and more than 40 articles. An editor of the forthcoming Encyclopedia of Forensic and Legal Medicine, she is project director for the National Institute of Justice Resource Guide for Users of Science and Technology. Professor Henderson received her J.D. degree from George Washington University.

Serri E. Miller joins Stetson as Research Director of the National Clearinghouse for Science, Technology and the Law and an adjunct professor. She earned her B.A. degree, summa cum laude, from Wright State University and her J.D. degree, summa cum laude, from Nova Southeastern University, where she served as Editor in Chief the ILSA Journal of International and Comparative Law. She clerked for U.S. Magistrate Judge Diane K. Vescovo in Memphis, Tenn., and has lectured in Florida, Boston and Washington, D.C., on legal technology management and technology-related legal ethics. Her work has been published in the ILSA Journal of International and Comparative Law and in Picturing Justice: The On-Line Journal of Law and Popular Culture.

Jeffrey J. Minneti is Stetson’s newest instructor of legal research and writing. A former elementary and middle school teacher, he graduated with a B.A. degree from the University of South Florida and a J.D. with honors from Cumberland School of Law at Samford University. Professor Minneti also holds an M.B.A. from Samford University School of Business. While in law school, he served as Editor in Chief of the American Journal of Trial Advocacy. He previously clerked for Alabama Supreme Court Justice Thomas A. Woodall and practiced law in Tampa.