Where law meets practice:

Ranked #1 in trial advocacy

Ranked #2 in legal writing

A clinic or externship available for every student
Establishing the standard for practical legal education since 1900.

Now more than ever, the legal profession demands that law school graduates be prepared to think like lawyers and be ready to practice law. At Stetson, you learn both.

Our professors teach interactive courses that carefully balance legal theory, policy and world-class skills training. Through experiences inside and outside the traditional classroom, you will learn to connect facts with doctrine, develop creative solutions, and understand an evolving array of legal issues. And from the very first semester, you will learn to advocate persuasively for clients and causes.

You will complete a rigorous required curriculum that emphasizes both learning and doing. You will apply your knowledge by researching issues, negotiating and drafting legal documents, presenting oral arguments, participating in mock trials, and working closely with practicing attorneys.

With a solid foundation, you also will have an opportunity to customize the balance of your legal education. You may choose to focus your elective courses on a particular field, pursue dual degrees, study abroad, serve on a journal, or intern for a judge or government agency. Regardless of your chosen path, the hallmarks of a Stetson legal education remain the same:

• A nationally ranked program of skills training.
• Incredible opportunities for professional experience through clinics, externships and advocacy competitions.
• A commitment to professionalism and public service — which also integrates students into the legal system at an early stage in their career.
• Comprehensive career development and bar preparation resources.
• A talented, accessible faculty who care about your success and are available outside the classroom.
• A rich and diversified intellectual life that includes regular opportunities to interact with distinguished scholars, practitioners, government officials and judges.
“I urge every student to consider our clinic and externship programs. We know that employers value practical legal experience, and clinical programs provide important opportunities to expand your skills and distinguish yourself in the marketplace.”

With more than 400 opportunities available each year, every student can do a clinic or externship.

There is no better way to learn the practice of law than by actually practicing it. Clinics and externships do just that, allowing you the critical opportunity to do real work in a living legal environment. Stetson’s robust clinical program can provide you with this necessary experience of working with state and federal courts, government agencies, corporations, law firms or legal aid organizations.

Stetson’s clinical courses are unique. Full-time law professors are closely involved as they supervise and mentor the students enrolled in each program. Courses are designed to enhance classroom-based learning and give students opportunities to gain valuable, real-world experience. These experiences allow students to observe and participate in the application of substantive law, and find solutions to problems that confront attorneys on a daily basis.

Externship courses place students in off-campus, legal environments where they observe and participate in the activities of host organizations. Externship placements vary widely and include state and federal courts, governmental agencies and local corporations. Consequently, students enjoy the unique opportunity to observe how these entities operate from behind the scenes. Students routinely perform functions such as reviewing documents, conducting research, and writing memoranda of law.

Most clinic courses also place students in off-campus, legal environments where they are authorized to practice law under the supervision of a licensed attorney. Placements include legal aid organizations, local governments, public defender offices and state attorney offices. Students routinely conduct research, interview clients and witnesses, write motions or memoranda of law, and advocate during hearings and trials. Most clinic participants are approved by the Florida Supreme Court as Certified Legal Interns (CLIs) authorized to practice law under the supervision of a licensed attorney. Consequently, CLIs may speak in open court and often includes arguing motions and advocating during criminal proceedings, including jury trials.

Stetson also has one in-house clinic, the Veterans Advocacy Clinic. Students in the clinic help veterans navigate the disability benefits application and appeals process of the Department of Veterans Affairs through the federal courts. In Fall 2014, Stetson Law and USF Health formed a first-of-its-kind partnership by joining forces to help Florida veterans through supportive clinical services, collaborative student training, and joint research.

Stetson provided me with such a strong foundation to begin my legal career as a prosecutor. As a certified legal intern, I had four jury trials while still in law school. I never wanted to do anything else.

Pam Bondi ’90

A national powerhouse recognized for preparing lawyers for every stage of the legal process.

As the nation’s top-ranked law school for advocacy education, Stetson offers you unparalleled opportunities to develop and test your legal abilities from the first client contact through the final appeal. Beyond the typical courses in trial procedure found at most law schools, at Stetson you’ll discover a comprehensive range of advocacy electives, clinical programs, intramural tournaments and interscholastic competition teams, as well as certificates of concentration.

Effective advocacy is one of a successful lawyer’s most important skills — regardless of practice area — and Stetson’s commitment to teaching advocacy is unmatched. Our lawyers and student-advocates excel in the classroom, in the courtroom, and in champion performances on our nationally and internationally lauded advocacy teams. Our professors have authored several leading books on advocacy, and our campuses feature seven courtrooms for experiential learning. Stetson annually hosts two interscholastic competitions: the International Environmental Moot Court Competition and the National Pretrial Competition.

During my skills classes and three externships, I learned how to be a lawyer through hands-on experience. My time on the Moot Court Board also has prepared me so well for my future career, giving me the opportunity to write briefs and argue in front of judicial panels.

JD/LLM in Advocacy

Stetson students may pursue both the J.D. and LL.M. in Advocacy degrees in as little as three years, sharing 12 credit hours, through Stetson’s joint-degree program.

Students in the joint-degree program will further advance their skill sets and create a portfolio that includes writing and performance samples for prospective employers.

A collegial atmosphere where professional relationships can last a lifetime.

From the moment you arrive, you’ll notice a difference at Stetson. A student ambassador serves as your personal mentor, guiding you through orientation and beyond. Classmates support each other, working together to achieve the shared goal of becoming lawyers. Involved and committed professors offer a level of access rarely found at larger institutions. A friendly administrative staff also provides personalized attention.

Faculty are involved in almost every aspect of campus life and are passionate about working with students both inside and outside the classroom. Professors from throughout the law school spend time serving as mentors, advising student organizations, and coaching advocacy teams. Student organizations provide opportunities for building leadership skills and relationships with peers, practicing attorneys and judges. An involved alumni community of more than 10,000 lawyers provides an international network of connections as you launch your legal career.

The ability to learn the law was honed at Stetson and served me well in my LL.M. program. When I arrived at Georgetown, I thought I would be outgunned by my counterparts. But as it turned out, the skills I developed at Stetson were just what I needed, not only to learn the law, but to graduate with distinction from Georgetown’s tax program.

The highest standards of professionalism, ethics and integrity are expected from all.

At Stetson, the practice of becoming a great lawyer takes on a deeper meaning. Professors and students alike appreciate the responsibility to serve the profession and improve society.

You will be regarded as a member of the legal profession beginning on your first day of law school. Stetson provides an environment that encourages and rewards the highest standards of professionalism. Every student has the opportunity to participate in a series of dynamic programs and presentations that foster discussion on current issues facing members of the legal profession.

During the 2014–15 academic year, Stetson law students donated 31,671 hours of pro bono service to more than 400 organizations. Stetson’s commitment to community service includes a 60-hour pro bono requirement for all students to enhance their law school experience.

My years at Stetson prepared me well for the practice of law. Stetson offers a rigorous curriculum in an environment that fosters excellence. The high academic standards and emphasis on clinical practice provide students with an outstanding legal education. I give my alma mater substantial credit for my success in the legal and judicial system.

Last year, Stetson law students provided more than 9,000 hours of non-legal community service and more than 22,000 hours of legal pro bono service to local organizations.
The academic culture and its unique location make Stetson an ideal place to pursue the study of law. The professors take a strong interest in the development and success of each individual student, and there is a great camaraderie within the student body. The law school experience at Stetson is a very positive one.

A dedicated, accessible faculty is committed to the academic and professional success of every student.

Stetson’s greatest resource is its faculty, who share their experiences and passion for the law with generations of lawyers. Stetson professors genuinely enjoy teaching and guiding students into the profession and practice. They will challenge you to reach your full potential. They will create opportunities for you to consider not only what the law is, but what it should be.

Our professors are among the finest legal educators in the country: Fulbright scholars, Supreme Court advocates, acclaimed authors and public servants. Stetson educators inspire students through their dedication to teaching, demonstrated commitment to community service, and record of high-quality scholarship. The full-time faculty is supplemented by outstanding judges and practicing attorneys who serve as adjunct professors in specialized areas.

A wide-ranging and innovative curriculum that includes practical training and diverse electives.

The J.D. curriculum combines foundational courses in contracts, torts, property, constitutional law, civil procedure, criminal law, professional responsibility, evidence, and legal research and writing, with area requirements and electives for a comprehensive educational experience.

J.D. students complete 88 credit hours and perform 60 hours of pro bono service to graduate. Full-time students spend the first year of their legal education completing most of the required curriculum. As second- and third-year students, you can tailor your legal education with a wide range of electives. Credits also may be earned through international programs, co-curricular activities and externships.

Stetson Law’s Academic Success Program is committed to assisting students in developing their academic skills. Our director is also a full-time faculty member dedicated to helping you adapt quickly to the academic demands of law school. Workshops and specialized guidance help advance your critical thinking skills.

Stetson’s Office of Bar Preparation Services is designed to assist students with every aspect of bar admission. Full-time staff attorneys provide individual counseling and group guidance on bar preparation. Students benefit from a personalized study plan and a full simulated exam, with review of their sample answers by bar preparation staff. Stetson alumni also provide coaching support to graduates taking the bar exam.

Seminar course with research paper
A faculty-supervised individual research project with research paper
Specialize your coursework to earn a certificate of concentration, or go the extra mile and pursue a second graduate degree.

Certificates of Concentration
If you're interested in practicing in a specialized area of law, you may choose to pursue a certificate of concentration in advocacy, elder law, environmental law, international law or social justice advocacy. You may apply for a concentration program after completing 30 hours of study. Candidates who are admitted to a concentration program must complete at least 21 credit hours of courses in the specialty and other requirements.

J.D./LL.M. in Advocacy
Stetson J.D. students may now pursue a joint degree through Stetson’s LL.M. in Advocacy program. This program allows you to apply up to 12 hours of prescribed J.D. courses toward the 24-credit LL.M. degree, so you'll only need to take 12 more hours (or one full-time semester) to finish the LL.M. after earning your J.D. Since the LL.M. courses are also offered online, you may finish the program wherever you choose to practice after your J.D. graduation.

J.D./M.B.A.
The College of Law and Stetson’s AACSB-accredited School of Business Administration offer an accelerated course of study leading to J.D. and M.B.A. degrees to broaden career opportunities in law and business. Students must be admitted to both programs. Full-time students typically complete both degrees within three years, including at least one summer session.

International Dual Degrees
Select students who are permitted to spend a full academic year in Stetson’s foreign exchange programs in England, France, Spain or Ireland may earn a second degree from our partner institutions upon successful completion of a year of academic work. Students may earn an LL.M. in one of seven concentrations from the University of East Anglia in Norwich, England; a Master of International Economic Law from Université Toulouse 1–Capitole in Toulouse, France; a Master of European Business Law from the Comillas Pontifical University in Madrid, Spain; or an LL.M. in one of five concentrations from the University College Dublin, Ireland. Students pursuing the Ireland LL.M. also must complete a thesis.

Intellectual Property Exchange
After the first year, a few select students interested in specializing in intellectual property law may participate in a semester exchange program with the University of New Hampshire School of Law’s Franklin Pierce Center for Intellectual Property.

Honors Program
High-achieving students may be invited to join Stetson’s full-year Honors Program after their first year (or second year if enrolled part-time). Honors Program students participate in an Honors Colloquium with several faculty members and take a special Honors Jurisprudence Seminar. Members also may be invited to other special events on campus.

Law and the Civil Rights Movement Travel Course
Each summer, Stetson offers an experience-based course on Law and The Civil Rights Movement. This course takes students to six cities to visit museums, institutes, universities and historic sites identified with the legal history of the 1964 Civil Rights Act and the 1965 Voting Rights Act. The academic itinerary includes personal interaction with Civil Rights Movement veterans and modern civil rights practitioners.

Academic Centers and Institutes
Stetson’s Centers for Excellence in advocacy, elder law, higher education law and policy, and international law sponsor conferences, workshops, scholarship and research projects within their areas. Students may serve as fellows who assist with research and major projects, and conferences are open to students on a space-available basis (usually with a tuition waiver). Stetson is also the home for institutes in biodiversity law and policy, Caribbean law and policy, legal communication and veterans law.

Legal Research and Writing
Stetson was ranked second in legal writing for 2016 by U.S. News & World Report. Taught by full-time professors, Stetson’s research and writing courses prepare you for career-long success in legal communication and advocacy. Stetson students have won writing awards at state and national levels.

LL.M. in International Law
The LL.M. in International Law is an intensive two-semester, 24-credit program located at the Gulfport campus. The program prepares graduates to enter the legal marketplace with thorough preparation in the skills and knowledge necessary to practice international law.

Online LL.M. in Advocacy
The 24-credit LL.M. in Advocacy builds upon Stetson’s national reputation as the leader in advocacy education. Students master methods of persuasion from theoretical and practical perspectives, and they may focus on advanced criminal litigation skills, civil litigation skills and advocacy teaching techniques.

Online LL.M. in Elder Law
Stetson’s LL.M. in Elder Law is a three-semester, 24-credit program that covers issues ranging from estate and long-term care planning for the elderly to disability law and guardianships.

“Our priority is to provide students with outstanding educational experiences to better prepare them for the challenges of the practice of law.”

Professor Rebecca C. Morgan
Boston Asset Management Chair in Elder Law; Co-author, Tax, Estate & Financial Planning for the Elderly, Planning for Disability, and Fundamentals of Special Needs Trusts
B.S.B.A., Central Missouri State University; J.D., Stetson University

Applicants for Stetson’s LL.M. programs must have received their first law degree at a law school accredited by the ABA or approved by the appropriate authority in its country. Florida and most other states require a J.D. degree from an accredited U.S. law school before an individual may sit for the bar examination.
International Opportunities

Stetson Law enables you to discover new lands and foreign legal systems through international coursework.
Explore new horizons while earning class credit in one of Stetson’s many international programs.

In an increasingly global society, Stetson enables you to discover new lands and foreign legal systems through several international study opportunities.

Semester in London: Spend a full semester taking classes and working in externships in the heart of London. Stetson offers a full 13-week semester program taught by American and British faculty in the historic Bloomsbury district, located just blocks away from major legal and cultural landmarks.

Summer Abroad Programs: Learn about international law, meet high-level officials, and tour legal and government institutions in one of Stetson’s summer abroad programs in Oxford, England; Seoul, South Korea; The Hague, Netherlands; or Granada, Spain. Time is built into the schedule to allow students the freedom to experience local culture and explore the region.

Cayman Islands Fall Intersession Program: Travel to George Town in the Cayman Islands between the fall and spring semesters for a two-week program housed at Truman Bodden Law School.

Spring Break in Cuba: Stetson’s Cuban Legal System and Society course culminates in a five-day spring break program in Cuba.

Foreign Exchange Programs: Stetson has formal agreements with the University of East Anglia in Norwich, England; University of Granada in Spain; University of Leicester in England; Victoria University in Melbourne, Australia; University College Dublin, Ireland; Université Toulouse 1 – Capitole in France; and Comillas Pontifical University in Madrid, Spain, for students to attend law school for up to one year at one of these institutions.

International Dual-Degrees: Stetson exchange students also may pursue dual degrees from the Université Toulouse 1 – Capitole in Toulouse, France (J.D./MINTEC – master’s in international economic law); Comillas Pontificial University in Madrid, Spain (J.D./M.E.B.L. in European Business Law); University of East Anglia in Norwich, England (J.D./LL.M.); or University College Dublin, Ireland (J.D./LL.M.).

I participated in the study abroad program at The Hague. Visiting the international courts was a huge learning experience, and the professors who taught these classes were absolutely top-notch.

Don’t let the historic buildings fool you — technology is integrated everywhere. And our campus looks even better in person.

From high-tech courtrooms and classrooms to a Google-mapped floor plan of the law library, few places in the world can compete with Stetson’s main law campus as an idyllic environment for the study of law. Inside the walls of this former 1920s resort in Gulfport/St. Petersburg, you’ll find classrooms and courtrooms equipped with sophisticated audio-visual technology. Stetson’s highly acclaimed law library attracts legal scholars from around the world with its comprehensive digital and print collections, not to mention its comfortable study areas.

Stetson’s Tampa Law Center, located at the entrance to downtown Tampa along the Hillsborough River, shares its Wm. Reece Smith Jr. Courtroom and satellite law library with Florida’s 2nd District Court of Appeal.

Stetson’s courtrooms feature high-end technology, including electronic evidence displays, cameras, plasma screens, microphones and speakers for observing court participants and jury deliberations. Wireless internet access is available throughout both campuses, and power/network connections are available at most classroom seats.

By the numbers:

Facilities

- 2 law campuses
- 7 courtrooms
- 50 library group study rooms
- 21-acre Gulfport campus
- 6.8-acre Tampa Law Center
- 70 wireless access points
- 3,920 network connections
- 419,501 library volumes
- 24/7 card access to the Dolly and Homer Hand Law Library

Stetson has done a great job of preparing me for life after law school. Stetson gives us the chance to take on all kinds of responsibilities and provides the support necessary to get things done.

Professor James Sheehan is Stetson’s Distinguished Practitioner in Residence, and he teaches courses in pre-trial practice, negotiation and mediation. In addition to his 30 years of practice experience, Professor Sheehan is the author of a popular trilogy of legal thrillers.
Stetson’s three-story Dolly and Homer Hand Law Library is a popular spot for law students looking for a quiet space to focus or private group-study rooms to collaborate with classmates. Five of Stetson’s seven professional law librarians have both J.D. and Master of Library Science degrees, and three are members of the Florida Bar.

At Stetson, I had the privilege of being taught by professors who genuinely care about my growth as a student and as an individual. I have also had the opportunity to serve the Gulfport community through pro bono legal work.

Share your interests in a vibrant campus culture and develop your leadership potential.

One hallmark of a great law school is an involved, active student body. More than 450 law student events are planned each year, so on any given day, you’ll find interesting speakers, community service projects, wellness programs, competitions and other activities coordinated by student organizations.

Stetson’s Student Bar Association has been recognized as one of the most effective student government organizations in the nation by the American Bar Association Law Student Division, and Stetson has produced many national and regional ABA/LSD officers in the past five years — including a past national chair. During spring break, Stetson students may participate in alternative spring break travel experiences to meet national leaders or provide pro bono service to an area in need.

You can earn a leadership certificate upon graduation by attending 10 hours of workshops through a program that won the ABA’s prestigious E. Smythe Gambrell Professionalism Award.

Our active intramural program includes team sports, competitions and exercise classes. A spacious fitness center and temperature-controlled pool are located on the Gulfport campus, which is also a short distance from several public beaches and bike trails.

With 45 student organizations, leadership opportunities are abound on campus.
When finishing my initial JAG Corps training, I was selected to compete against three other classmates in a trial competition. Many classmates came from top law schools and had appreciable litigation experience. I won the competition, and it was nice to find out that my advocacy training at Stetson was the real deal.

At Stetson, we know that your first job after law school is just that — the first step in a long, successful and rewarding career. Accordingly, we will provide the tools and toolkit to help you launch the career that is right for you. An accessible career development staff supports your career choices through individual coaching sessions, group meetings and programs. Also, many of the successful attorneys in Stetson’s 10,000-member alumni community stand ready to help new graduates get started.

Stetson’s Career ToolKit workshop series provides a framework and essential information for career planning and job searching. The workshops focus on a wide range of subjects, including:

- Planning and Organizing Your Job Search
- Job Search Documents and Publications (including resumes and cover letters)
- Professional Etiquette
- Career Preparation During School Breaks
- Social Media Strategies
- Building Your Network
- Talking Points and Conversation
- Judicial Clerkship Preparation

Before joining Stetson, Director of Career Development Cathy Martin served as a human resources executive. She also has served in leadership positions in Workforce Florida, Leadership Florida and other organizations.
Successful Stetson lawyers work in every sector of the legal profession, including government agencies, the judiciary, the military and nongovernmental organizations, as well as large, medium and small law firms. Beyond the legal arena, our graduates have achieved success in business, public and private education, health care, sports management, broadcasting and other fields.

You will have abundant access to Stetson’s career development tools, instruction, advice and hands-on opportunities to practice critical career and job acquisition skills.

The rest is up to you. Employment following law school depends on a number of important factors, including academic performance, bar exam passage, class rank, grades, clinic and externship participation, and your personal efforts to learn, master and apply career development skills.

The job market at the time of graduation, as well as the location and sector where you wish to practice, will affect the length of time it may take to achieve employment in your first position after law school.

An exciting array of attractions, beaches and activities are waiting just around the corner.

The active yet relaxing Florida lifestyle is an ideal counterpoint to the rigors of academic study. As part of the Tampa Bay metropolitan region, Stetson offers you access to one of Florida’s most vibrant business and legal communities, and positions you in a thriving cultural center with numerous environmental and international opportunities.

The St. Petersburg/Gulfport region boasts magnificent beaches, palm-lined boulevards and sunshine throughout the year. Relax to live music at one of the many restaurants and clubs on the beach or downtown. Refine your tennis stroke or golf swing. Attend a spring training game. Or spend a day on cultural pursuits at the Museum of Fine Arts or the Salvador Dali Museum.

Tampa offers Busch Gardens theme park and animal preserve, the Florida Aquarium, and the nightlife of historic Ybor City. The Tampa Bay region also is rich in parks, biking paths, playing fields, fishing piers, boating, shopping, marinas and golf courses. The temperate climate allows you to enjoy these activities year round.

Tampa Bay is home to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers and the Tampa Bay Lightning. The Tampa Bay Rays and the Tampa Bay Rowdies play just five miles away from Stetson’s Gulfport campus.

Starting from the first year, Stetson provided a great opportunity to learn what it means to be a professional in the legal field.

Applying to Stetson
If you haven’t already applied to Stetson, you can find more information by visiting stetson.edu/lawadmissions or calling 727-562-7802 to set up a visit with a counselor.

Entering Student Scholarships
Stetson Law awards multi-year scholarships to selected entering students. All admitted students are considered for scholarships; no special application is required. Scholarships are awarded based on academic excellence, a range of other personal accomplishments and experiences, and the ability to further the mission of the College of Law. Applicants who wish for their unique circumstances and backgrounds to be considered may include an addendum with their application. Scholarships are awarded on a rolling basis. For Fall 2015, approximately 55 percent of incoming students received a scholarship ranging from partial tuition to full tuition plus a stipend. Detailed information about the selection process, scholarship retention data, and scholarships from Stetson and outside sources can be found at stetson.edu/lawfinaid.

Assistance for Continuing Students
Several programs provide financial assistance to students after they enroll, including a number of partial-tuition scholarships based on first-year academic performance, leadership, public service and need. Scholarships to recognize public service are also available through endowed and university funds. Stetson offers a full-tuition scholarship for a student entering his or her final year with a record of public service who plans to continue that path for three years after graduation.

Stetson participates in the Veterans Affairs Yellow Ribbon Program, offering tuition assistance to student veterans or eligible dependents.

Teaching assistantships and faculty research assistantships are available on a competitive basis to upper-level students who have a strong academic record and an interest in scholarly research and writing. Teaching assistants support faculty teaching (but do not teach courses themselves), and research assistants support professors with their scholarly publications and other projects.

Federal Financial Aid
Students seeking any type of federal financial aid must annually submit the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). The FAFSA is available on January 1 of each year and can be completed online at www.fafsa.ed.gov. The information on the FAFSA is transmitted electronically to the schools you list on the application. Stetson Law’s school code is E00342.

Student loans are processed through the federal Direct Loan Program. The lender is the U.S. Department of Education, though the entity you interact with (your loan servicer) can be a private business. Student borrowers are not required to begin making payments until after they graduate or leave school. The Direct Loan Program offers Stafford Unsubsidized Loans (fixed rate, currently 5.84%) and Graduate Plus Loans (fixed rate, currently 6.84%) to graduate or professional students. Interest rates are subject to change. The Graduate Plus Loan will require a credit check. To be considered credit-worthy, students must have non-delinquent credit or obtain a co-endorser. Students are encouraged to check their credit report on an annual basis.

For more information about federal student loans, visit www.studentloans.gov and studentaid.gov. All students who borrow must complete entrance and exit counseling, sign master promissory notes and accept conditions of receiving financial aid. Students may schedule one-on-one sessions with our friendly financial planning counselors or attend workshops on any of the following topics:

- Public Service Loan Forgiveness
- Understanding, Managing and Repairing Credit
- Financial Advocacy (one-credit course)
- Finances During the Bar Exam Study Period

Living Expenses
Living expense budget projections based on double-occupancy living arrangements are available at stetson.edu/lawfinaid. Students who complete the FAFSA will be offered a financial aid package to cover the full cost of attendance (including living expenses), although many students choose not to accept the full amount of loan aid offered. Students will be given a sample monthly budget showing local living expense averages, and should reduce expenses wherever possible. Stetson financial planning counselors are ready to offer support via Skype, by phone or in person, including evening hours.

The faculty, administration and student organizations do a great job of creating a wonderful learning environment. Also, many people don’t realize how important research and writing skills are in the legal field. I love that Stetson has one of the top legal research and writing programs in the nation.
