

Campus events bring diversity of ideas

Scholars, speakers and students from many walks of life have visited the College of Law over the academic year. From local officials to national leaders, dozens of speakers have addressed students in classes and at luncheons and special presentations. Competitions hosted at Stetson have brought law students from around the United States and the world to experience Stetson first-hand. Other events were held to honor the achievements of alumni and students.

GIDEON V. WAINWRIGHT 40TH ANNIVERSARY EVENT — Dean Emeritus Bruce Jacob '59 spoke to a crowd exceeding 200 about his reflections on the landmark Supreme Court case. Panelists (from left) Judge Nelly Khouzam, Professor Paul Marcus of William & Mary, Public Defender Bob Dillinger '76, and Professor Bob Batey discussed the case following Jacob's presentation.

BLSA THIRD ANNUAL JUDGE STRINGER YOUTH DAY — Stetson's Black Law Students Association hosted 50 pre-law high school students for its third annual Judge Stringer Youth Day, which included a diversity panel discussion and lunch to encourage minority participation in the field.

ABA NATIONAL CLIENT COUNSELING COMPETITION — Members of Stetson's Client Skills Board, pictured above, served as hosts during for the ABA National Client Counseling Competition that was hosted by Stetson in March. University of Missouri won the competition.

INNS OF COURT BANQUET — From left, William Minton and Cory Kravit speak with ABA President-Elect Dennis Archer, the first African American to hold the position. Archer, former mayor of Detroit and former Michigan Supreme Court Justice, was the featured speaker for the annual Inns of Court banquet held in January at the Great Hall. During his presentation, he spoke of the need for professionalism and diversity in the legal profession.

INTERNATIONAL ENVIRONMENTAL MOOT COURT COMPETITION — Associate Dean Royal Gardner, second from left, presents awards to the team from Delhi University, India. Queensland University of Technology won the overall competition, which was held Nov. 1-2, 2002.

First-rate academics.

Help enrich Stetson's academic programs and build the College's outstanding faculty. One of the goals of the Cornerstone Campaign is to raise $2.25 million to expand academic concentration programs, $2.25 million to recruit, retain and reward exceptional professors, and $1 million for research and training programs.
