Fellow/Staff Attorney, October 2022 – June 2026

- Developed novel litigation strategies and case theories seeking recognition of young people's fundamental right to a stable climate system under constitutions and common law principles like the public trust doctrine. This involved research and writing on the history and application of the Fourteenth Amendment's substantive and procedural due process rights and equal protection rights, as well as unique state constitutional provisions. In addition to substantive claims, this work required substantial research on federal and state jurisdictional requirements and innovative strategies to litigate climate change as a unique constitutional harm to young people.
